WHY SUFFER

Dr. Gilchrist

UNDER STRAIT OF GIBRALTAR

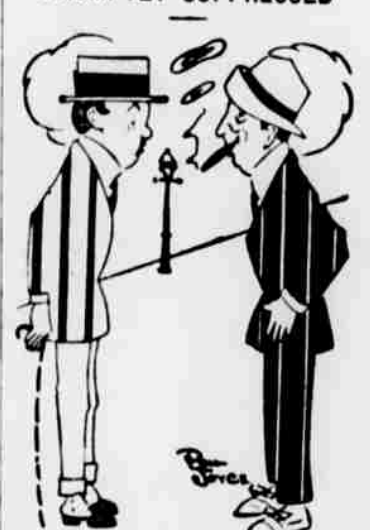

Project for Tunnel is Believed by Engineers to Be Comparatively Simple Matter.

If it is feasible to tunnel the English channel, twenty miles in width, it is even more feasible to tunnel the Strait of Gibraltar, which is but eight miles wide at its narrowest part. I do not imagine that such a man as Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania would hesitate at such a job, writes Edward Hungerford in the Saturday Evening Post.

This would mean that it would be an easy matter indeed to send a through train from London under the English channel, across France and Spain, the selfsame Strait of Gibraltar and straight to the wonderful new port of Dakar, which the French have been so quietly constructing these past few years in Senegal at almost the extreme westernmost point of Africa.

There the Atlantic is narrow indeed. An ordinary fast steamer can cross from Dakar to South America in four or five days, while the traffic experts in London figure out that, with such a through rail route, from Charing Cross or Victoria to Rio de Janeiro will be only eight days and Buenos Aires nine days distant from London; with Santiago de Chile, by means of the Trans-Andean railroad, only two days farther.

PROMPTLY SUPPRESSED

"Are you what they call a parlor socialist?"
"No. I used to be one, but I came in with muddy feet and my wife forbade me the use of the parlor."

PAJAMAS AMONG SNAKES.

When Northern Pacific train No. 41 was derailed at dawn near Pasco, Ida., recently, five of the coaches were overturned and badly smashed, but none of the passengers was injured beyond slight bruises. Sixteen rattlesnakes which escaped from their crate caused more excitement than all the rest of the wreck.

About one hundred passengers, still attired in night robes, made a wild scramble for the tops of the coaches when the rattlers began to announce their presence, though the baggage men stuck to their jobs and rounded up all but one of the reptiles, which belonged to a traveling carnival company. When the train reached Yakima the passengers received their baggage gingerly, because the viper was believed to be secreted in the baggage car, which had been attached to the relief train.

CLOSER QUARTERS.

"It's a shame the way people are packed into these trolley cars like sardines," exclaimed the fussy old gentleman. "There's hardly room to draw a long breath."
"I've traveled with much less comfort," said a husky young man as he gently but firmly removed a fellow passenger's elbow from the pit of his stomach.
"Where, sir? Where, sir?"
"I was once headed for Germany in a tank."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

CONFUSED CALCULATION.

"How many wives had Solomon?"
"What difference does that make?"
"I was just wonderin' how he could have been the richest man if he had to provide his family with shoes at $25 a pair."

CHANGED CIRCUMSTANCES.

"I thought you said you wouldn't marry him if he were the last man on earth?"
"So I did, but I had no idea that he would strike it rich in business."
